

Autumn Term 2023 - LSE Education Forum

Thursday 19 October (10am-12pm), MAR.2.09/online

Student voice at LSE: moving forward from discussion to impact

Student voice has become a growing area of interest in UK higher education, underlined by recent National Student Survey scores. The Autumn term Education Forum will focus on how the LSE community understands student voice and explore ways in which colleagues are embedding student feedback and experiences into their everyday practices in the classroom and beyond. We will hear from both staff and students and work together to develop a stronger understanding of student voice and how we can all positively contribute to this area of work so that all our students genuinely feel their voices are heard during their time at LSE.

10.05-10.10am	Welcome and introduction: Why does student voice matter?	Dr Claire Gordon (Director, LSE Eden Centre)
10.10-10.40am	What is Student Voice? Panel discussion	Prof Emma McCoy (President and Pro-Vice Chancellor for Education) Dr Miriam Tresh (Assistant Professor, Department of Psychological and Behavioural Science) James Relf (LSESU General Secretary)
10.40-11.20am	What enables students to express their voices and be heard in the classroom?	Nigham Jahangiri (final year PPE UG) Jillian Ducker (Media and Communications PGT alum) Dr Olivia Umurerwa Rutazibwa (Assistant Professor, Human Rights and Politics, Department of Sociology) Dr Jean-Christophe Plantin (Associate Professor, Department of Media and Communications) Sarah Onifade (LSESU Welfare and Liberation Officer) Chair: Lydia Halls (Student Partnership Manager, LSE Eden Centre)
11.20-11.50am	Group discussion
11.50am-12pm	Closing thoughts	Professor Emma McCoy and Dr Claire Gordon

CLOSE